

Kampala Capital City Authority (KCCA) is responsible for the operations of the capital City of Kampala in Uganda.

The report summarizes the existing quality of the wetlands and other aquatic and terrestrial areas in Kampala, identifies the causes of their environmental vulnerability, and the ...

This research aims to bridge this gap by proposing a data-driven approach to sustainable transportation planning aligned with global and national sustainability goals. It will provide actionable ...

In a bustling urban setting like Kampala, where rapid development often overshadows the need for environment preservation, a unique partnership has emerged to rewrite the narrative.

60% of solid waste in Kampala remains uncollected, exacerbating environmental degradation and health risks. The study employs a survey design with a sample size determined by the Taro Yamane ...

What began as a response to falling trees has become a comprehensive environmental strategy tackling health, equity and climate change. Kampala has recently expanded its mission to ...

Some green practices including energy conservation, environmental purchasing, waste management and water conservation among others have been implemented in the five-star hotels in Kampala ...

As our city grows, it's essential that we protect and enhance the natural environment to ensure a high quality of life for future generations. Whether you're a resident, a business owner, or a visitor to ...

In line with the KPDP 2012, the Ministry of Kampala and Metropolitan Affairs was created by the President of Uganda to ease political administration within neighbouring urban centres. KCCA's ...

By exploring sustainable solutions, the study aims to provide a framework for effective waste reduction that can be applied in Kampala and other rapidly urbanizing regions facing similar waste ...

Kampala environmental sustainability

Web: <https://klconsulting.co.za>

